because of the exceptionally high proportion of imports in Britain's food supply and the determined efforts of the enemy to sever the supply lines efficient management of food resources was an essential element in the British national war effort this volume was the first comprehensive study of this vital aspect of government strategy and fills a gap in the historiography of this period this volume provides a balanced picture by drawing together the diverse elements that went into food policy economic and social trends international trade relations and labour issues the author also traces the evolution of food policy during the pre war planning period and the early part of the war and analyses the roles of the United States and the labour organizations focuses on providing answers to the question of how food production and consumption systems can stay within the limits of the carrying capacity of our natural environment this work also considers the challenges of food security and nutrition in the context of sustainability and a growing world population while the history of food on the home front in wartime Britain has mostly focused on rationing this book reveals the importance and scale of nation wide communal dining schemes during this era welcomed by some as a symbol of a progressive future in which wasteful home dining would disappear and derided by others for threatening the social order these sites of food and eating attracted great political and cultural debate using extensive primary source material feeding the people in wartime Britain examines the cuisine served in these communal restaurants and the people who used them it challenges the notion that communal eating played a marginal role in wartime food policy and reveals the impact they had in advancing nutritional understanding and new food technologies comparing them to similar ventures in mainland Europe and understanding the role of propaganda from the Ministry of Food in their success Evans unearths this neglected history of emergency public feeding and relates it to contemporary debates around food policy in times of crisis
