m b kastan cancer is a disease resulting from alterations of cellular genes which cause phenotypic changes in somatic cells usually when we think about genetic diseases we think about inheriting one or two abnormal genes from our parents and these gene abnormalities confer the disease phenotype in contrast in the majority of cancers no such inherited gene abnormalities can be identified which does not mean that they do not exist and there is no obvious family history suggesting an inherited disease the vast majority of genes which are altered in the cancer cells are not transmitted through the germ line but rather become abnormal in somatic cells sometime during the lifetime of the individual thus the critical question which arises is how do these genetic changes occur in somatic cells epidemiologic data suggest that exposure to environmental carcinogens contribute to the genesis of at least 80 of all human cancers Doll and Peto 1981 thus it is natural to suspect that the genetic changes in somatic cells which contribute to the transformed phenotype arise from DNA damage caused by such exposures therefore understanding how cells respond to DNA damaging agents is likely to be an important component of our understanding of the genesis of human tumors
