the objective of this book is to present an integrated set of original papers from leading authorities in the field related to optimal balance between arms reduction and regional and international security the emphasis is on economics and management rather than politics and diplomacy

the need for a better understanding of the role location plays in economic life was first and most famously made explicit by Bertil Ohlin in 1933. However, it is only recently with the development of computer packages able to handle complex systems as well as advances in economic theory, in particular an increased understanding of returns to scale and imperfect competition, that Ohlin's vision has been met and a framework developed which explains the distribution of economic activity across space. This book is an integrated non-mathematical first principles textbook presenting geographical economics to advanced students, never avoiding advanced concepts. Its emphasis is on examples, diagrams, and empirical evidence, making it the ideal starting point prior to monographic and journal material. It contains copious computer simulation exercises available in book and electronic format to encourage learning and understanding through application. It uses case study material from North America, Europe, Africa, and Australasia.

Economic sanctions are increasingly used as a legal, non-military technique of combating abusers of international peace. However, it remains unclear how the success or failure of these sanctions is measured. This book examines the seldom-explored United Nations economic sanctions deliberation process and exposes systematic problems in the measurement of the success or failure of these sanctions, centering on the key concepts of peace and security. The author brings the reader's attention to the discrepancies that exist in the process of decision making, implementation, and evaluation of an imposed economic sanction. She engages international law and development methods to provide proof for the lack of consensus in measures of success and failure, which in turn suggests that sanction implementation on a uniform domestic front are unattainable. This thorough analysis concludes with suggestions for improving the sanctions process, only to clear the path for negating them as a whole and suggest alternative, non-coercive measures for mitigating conflict situations and threats to peace and security.

This up-to-date third edition provides an accessible introduction to urban and geographical economics using real-world examples and key models.
